AWARD

This is an application under Section 33C(2) of the I.D.A., 1947, in short the Act, filed by the above applicant against the above opponent, claiming from the latter the sum of Rs. 693/89, part of his provident fund still due to him.

2. It is his contention that he was working for the opponent as a driver since June 1969 and his services were terminated w.e.f. 15th June 1979. His provident fund account, inclusive of the employer's contribution, amounted to Rs. 1,387/78, but the opponent paid him only Rs. 693/89.

3. The employer, in its statement before the Court, has stated that, in fact, the applicant has contributed to the Provident Fund instituted in the establishment and that the said fund was for the exclusive benefit of the employee. The voluntary provident fund scheme was established by the opponent for its staff. Since there are no bye laws and regulations regarding this voluntary scheme, provident fund rules and regulations are applicable to this fund and hence the contribution of the employee with interest has been given to the employee while the contribution of the employer with interest was transferred to the account of the opponent. Under section 69(3)(i) of the Public Provident Fund Act 1952, as the membership of the applicant was for less than 3 years, the opponent was entitled to deduct 75 p.c. of the employers contribution. Such contribution in this case was Rs. 693/89.

In its cross, the employer has stated that he did not know whether the applicant was given to understand at the time of joining the voluntary Provident Fund Scheme that the entire amount of the fund would be given to him.

4. It is an admitted fact that there are no special rules framed by the Management of the employer regarding the voluntary provident fund scheme instituted by them for their staff members. The applicant's contention that he was informed by the Management at the time of joining the scheme that he would be entitled to the full amount of the provident fund, inclusive of the employer's contribution, has not been proved since, besides his statement and of his colleague Shri Camilo, in a similar case bearing No. LCC/9/80, there is no other evidence to support the same. In the absence of special rules framed by the employer, I feel that the Provident Fund Acts and Rules 1952 are to be applied in this case to the extent they are applicable. Section 69 of the Provident Fund Act, quoted by the employer, specifies that cases when the employer is entitled to recover the full amount of the provident fund standing to his credit. The case of the applicant being of termination of services or individual retrenchment would come under letter 'd' of Section 69(1). Section 69(3), quoted above by the employer, would not be attracted in our case because that sub-section contemplates withdrawals of amounts under sub para 2, which is not the case.

5. In view of the above, I pass the following order:

ORDER

The employer is directed to pay to the applicant Rs. 693/89 deducted by him at the time of payment of his provident fund with interest at the rate of 10 p.c. from the date of deduction till the date of effective payment, alongwith costs of Rs. 100/-.
